08:46:35 From Amelia Wong-Mersereau to Everyone:

Question about journals: I wasn't aware that the author may have to pay fees when publishing. Is this common with academic publishers? Is there not a fee that is paid to the author for their writing?

08:52:49 From Emma Dove to Everyone:

Question about publishing images: If publishing a journal article which includes an analysis of photography (contemporary, not archival), how would you publish this material? Is the author responsible for getting permission from photographers to include their work in a publication, or is this the responsibility of the publisher? Thank you very much.

Alex: what are the steps for submitting to 'Victoriographies'? Are you the contact person for that journal?

08:59:53 From Monica Rojo to Everyone:

How/where would I find peer reviewers if I am supposed to provide a list of suggested reviewers? Would I contact people 'cold call' style to ask if they would be willing to peer review or would the publisher have a broad list of people they use?

I'm in the middle of peer review revisions for my first journal article. How much autonomy do I have in maintaining some of my content unchanged, or how much risk is there that I'll be turned down if I don't make every change requested?
